Middlesex-London Health Unit Commitment to Equity, Truth & Reconciliation

In response to the Middlesex-London Health Unit's June 2020 declaration that racism is a public health crisis, the Health Unit hired a consultancy group to assist with the development of an Anti-Black Racism Plan \(ABRP\) for the agency. The Anti-Black Racism Plan was also shaped through the engagement of local African, Caribbean, and Black (ACB) community representatives. The ABRP has identified 45 recommendations, which are focused on addressing and eliminating anti-Black racism from public health programs and services in London and Middlesex County, and on collaborating with others to address and eliminate anti-Black racism more broadly.

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada provides 94 “calls to action” that lay the groundwork for how all sectors, including health, in what is now known as Canada can move forward in addressing systemic inequities and work towards reconciliation with Indigenous Peoples. In response to these calls to action, the Middlesex-London Health Unit has developed and is currently implementing Taking Action for Reconciliation: An Organizational Plan for the Middlesex-London Health Unit. It is imperative to recognize that colonialism is the over-riding determinant of health for Indigenous Peoples. For public health to decrease existing health inequities, an understanding of the full context of Indigenous experiences of trauma and oppression over generations is needed.
